Hainesville History

in the year 1847, by special permission from the legislature, through the efforts of Elijah M. Haines a charter was granted for the town of Hainesville. In 1902 an election was held changing Hainesville from a town to a village. Elijah Haines produced the first plat map of Lake County while working as a school master for the first school in Littlefort, now Waukegan. Hainesville's first schoolhouse was a log cabin built in 1946. This schoolhouse also held church services for the residents. Hainesville also once housed the train station and the post office. In 1847, Haines met Abraham Lincoln at a convention in Chicago. In 1848, Hainesville became a toll road stop on the predecessor of Belvidere Road (Route 120), formerly known as Old Plank Road. The wooden plank road was built to link Waukegan to McHenry County. Hainesville once had a small private cemetery, which is supposed to be located South of Cranberry Lake. There have been many attempts to locate the cemetery, but all has been unsuccessful.
